

The Significance of the Fee

The Bagnall Project, Chesham, HP5 1PE 10am – 4pm

‘Resistance finds the best hiding place’ (Gabbard, G.2010)

This workshop will explore the many different and subtle ways in which money is spoken, or more often not spoken, about in our consulting rooms. What do we think and how do we work with this unspoken dynamic of money? How do we deal with the thorny issues of missed sessions, clients “forgetting” to pay, no money being brought to a session and the setting of an adequate fee? What are the technical aspects involved in thinking about and dealing with money?

We will endeavour to think about our own issues and difficulties around money so we can then work more effectively with our clients. As Gabbard says ‘resistance finds its best hiding place’ in us both!

The Tutor

Joan Bristow draws on 25 years of professional experience in a wide range of settings. She currently works in private practice as a psychodynamic psychotherapist. She has completed a MA on her special interest, working with adults who are on the autistic spectrum. She is a qualified supervisor, supervising groups of therapists and individuals within her practice. She has a keen interest in training and has led many workshops.

Cost of the workshop is £65 – this includes lunch.
